

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

"Eighty Years and More."
"This yet high day, thy staff resume,
And fight fresh battles for the truth,
For that is age but youth's full bloom.
A riper, more transcendent youth!
A weight of gold
Is never old;
Streams broadened grow as downward rolled."

At sixty-two life has begun;
At seventy-three begin once more;
Fly swifter as thou near'st the sun,
And brighter shine at eighty-four;
At ninety-five
Shouldst thou arrive
Still wait on God and work and thrive.
—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Onward thou shalt go,
Bearing thy own and cheering others'
woe;
Treading the path where guiding angels
lead,
And scattering on thy way the priceless
seed
Which, sown in tears, is harvested in joy.

Circular Letter.

"The whole country mourns for General Fitzhugh Lee, a soldier, statesman and patriot. The Richmond Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, representing every memorial and patriotic association of women in the city of Richmond, have determined to erect a monument in loving memory of Virginia's honored son. They give an opportunity to a united country to show respect to his memory and life.

"A Virginian of Virginia, he bore himself so nobly that he was called to represent a united country. Let willing offerings be sent at the list of names who loved him and followed him in defense of his native State; by women who have ever honored their dead; by soldiers who served with him in the Spanish-American war; by the city which requested that he be laid to rest with his comrades in Hollywood; by the State to whose service his last moments were given; by the country whose honor he upheld on a foreign and hostile soil, both in peace and war. He has added another name to the list of heroes and, as such, we honor him.

THE SONG OF THE SEA WIND.

By AUSTIN DOBSON.

Other selections from this author, his portrait, autograph and biographical sketch, have already been printed in this series.

HOW it sings, sings, sings,
Blowing sharply from the sea-line,
With an edge of salt that stings;
How it laughs aloud and passes,
As it cuts the close cliff-grasses;
How it sings again and whistles,
How it shakes the stout sea-thistles—
How it sings!

How it shrieks, shrieks, shrieks,
In the crannies of the headland,
In the gashes of the creeks;
How it shrieks once more and catches
Up the yellow foam in patches;
How it whirls it out and over
To the cornfield and the clover,—
How it shrieks!

How it roars, roars, roars,
In the iron under-caverns,
In the hollows of the shores;
How it roars anew and thunders,
As the strong bull splits and sunders;
And the spent ship, tempest-driven,
On the reef lies rent and riven,—
How it roars!

How it wails, wails, wails,
In the tangle of the wreckage,
In the flapping of the sails;
How it sobs away, subsiding,
Like a tired child after chiding;
And across the ground-swell rolling,
You can hear the bell-buoy tolling,—
How it wails!

THE PIONEER. By Geraldine Bonner. Pp. 322. $1.50. Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

This is a good story, with the added advantage of an unbroken background. The situation with which the action starts moving struck us as being really fresh and particularly effective. The Old Colonel Parrish, returning to Nevada, after an absence of twenty-one years to oust a squatter, upon the Parrish tract—once deemed worthless, but now suddenly valuable through the discovery of a mineral spring upon it—finds that the squatter was none other than the man who long ago had betrayed his friendship and ran off with his wife-to-be, a brief day or two before his wedding. The Colonel finds that his faithless love had been happy with the shiftless ne'er-do-well, for whom she had jilted him, and there were also two children, fair flowers of girl, just crossing the line of womanhood. The Colonel was a generous man; for Beauregard Allen, he had only the contempt which is the natural lot of false friendship, but to Allen's children he could not be indifferent. So the squatters stay on the Parrish tract, and young June Allen becomes his practice and principal object in life. "Beau" Allen accepted the land from the man he had wronged without a quibble; in fact, as long as he lived, he evinced a perfect willingness to take anything that the Colonel would toss him. But early in the story, ore was struck which is the natural lot of false friendship, but to Allen's children he could not be indifferent.
